

Want to start trading with China? Then follow our lead...

The Cooper Parry Asia Pacific team are currently growing their position in the Chinese marketplace and strengthening relationships with our Western Chinese partners. Our ongoing involvement in the region means that we are ideally positioned to assist UK businesses who are seeking access to professional support as they strive to conduct business with this market.

So why China?

Last year it was estimated that trade between China and the UK was worth $40bn (£20.2bn) which makes it an important market to businesses in the UK in terms of exports and imports, but it's also a two-way street as China are already actively seeking and acquiring UK businesses.

Our most recent visit to Western China was exceptionally well received by both local corporates and the professional community. Consequently, in conjunction with the East Midlands China Business Bureau, we are returning in April as part of a joint collaborative trade mission, to deliver seminars on 'Doing Business in the UK'.

The scale of the opportunity is so big that it cannot be ignored and in a recent visit, Gordon Brown commented that there is a "huge opportunity" for British businesses in China.
